I truly felt for most of my time at East that I belonged. East does a great job at working with everyone and making everyone feel welcome. There was a level of entitlement within the old administration that I wish wasn't around, although I do know that there was a change in principle and possibly that made a difference. There was a stigma around the school that sports were held far higher than arts and unfortunately that led to a few miscommunications with the arts department and the administration. In the future I would just really like to see the entire administration work to make every aspect of the school safe for everyone and break the structures of "sports kids" and "drama kids" by creating an inclusive environment.

I loved my 4 years at East High School! Not only did they offer a variety of AP and Honors courses, they made it easy to become involved in the school through extracurricular activities. I was able to start my own club, compete at nationals for constitutional law, and form friendships with a diversity of people. Advisors and teachers were always eager to help me with any academic problem I had, no matter how big or small. The school truly comes together at sports events to support fellow student athletes. Anything is possible when you are an angel!

I went to East for 2 years before transferring out. It's a great school for many kids, with a few amazing supportive teachers who care a lot about the students. With a student body that is very energized and diverse. There are downfalls to the school, like that it's not very clean. Which is understandable it's a massive school so it's hard to maintain. But there have been sinks that were ripped out, windows smashed, strange smells, rats, and broken everything. The academics are alright, you can choose your route of difficulty and how hard you want to work. But even then, it's all manageable. Some departments are better than others, for example, the language department is a joke. The teachers try but the content is story based and mostly taught in English. Even with the high diversity, the school has in the student body, the "diques" are not diverse. The culture is built on partying and drugs, not on academic excellence. It's a good school for what it is, but not the best one ever.

I was an international student at East High School for my senior year - class 2012. The school and everyone here were so nice, from teachers, students to staff! Everyone had helped me a lot through out my school year and I have learned many new things. I miss my friends there and hope someday I can come back to visit them.

East high school is the perfect place for anyone who wants a little bit of everything. There are great teachers who make learning fun and enjoyable, while at the same time no other public school in Colorado matches the angel spirit. With over 2,500 students, no matter where you go, there will always be a new face you have never seen before, and there is a place for anyone to fit in. I have enjoyed myself at East high school from the challenging, yet rewarding STEM classes to my fun and diverse art classes. After four years I am well prepared for college because of the resources available and connections I have made thus far. Once an angel always an angel!
