As far as health and safety in the school went, it was great. Never did someone wonder if they were in danger but part of that came from an overactive dean looking to punish kids for anything resembling a touch of another person.

As a student there I never participated in many of the clubs and stuff like that, so they could have done with a little more advertizing of them in school to attract more kids

This school is in the middle of Highlands Ranch and because of that diversity faltered. This gave most of the students an attitude of being stuck-up and entitled.

It's the one thing that RanchView really does right, they have great equipment and teachers to teach the sports

Most of the teachers were great but the ones that weren't just made the whole school feel that much worse
